3 · STATISTICAL FOUNDATION & PROFILE (TIER 1)

CHART 1 · GOALS & ASSISTS BY SEASON (D.C. UNITED)

Data source: FBref. Note the exceptional 1998 season (10G, 13A) and the consistent assist output.

METRIC	CAREER TOTAL (CLUB)	PER 90 / CONTEXT
Matches Played	206	Across 4 clubs, 4 leagues
Minutes Played	17,195	~191.1 full 90s
Goals	36	0.19 per 90 mins
Assists	69	0.36 per 90 mins
Goal Contributions (G+A)	103	0.54 per 90 mins (Elite)
Shots on Target	156	0.86 per 90 mins
Penalties Scored	6	Out of 7 taken (86%)
Yellow Cards	57	Aggressive but disciplined
Red Cards	4	Including the famous 1994 WC red

⚠ Data limitation. While the statistical data is extensive (thanks to FBref/StatsBomb), it is still a seasonal aggregate. It gives us volume, efficiency, and output, but not the tactical context of each action. For a full Tier 3 assessment, we would need timestamped event data across at least five matches.

4 · TACTICAL DNA (80-PHILOSOPHY FRAMEWORK) — INFERENTIAL ONLY

⚠ Tier 3 is partial — the percentages below are inferential analyst estimates, supported by FBref data where available. They are NOT derived from a scored Tier 3 event log and are NOT FGA output.

CHART 2 · PHILOSOPHY FIT — BAR

Menotti Liberty (#44)	88%	Source-linked
Santana JogaBonito (#41)	85%	Inferred
Bielsa Intensity (#46)	72%	Inferred
Bilardo Planner (#45)	65%	Low
Zubeldia Edge (#78)	55%	Low

PRIMARY — MENOTTI LIBERTY (#44) · 88% INFERENTIAL

The strongest qualitative link. Etcheverry was a left-footed playmaker whose game was built on individual expression and creative freedom — the essence of Menotti's libertad con orden. The source's description of his "devilish dribbling" and instinctive artistry fits the Menottian archetype of the gifted attacker allowed to express himself.

SECONDARY — SANTANA JOGABONITO (#41) · 85% INFERENTIAL

The Brazilian influence. Etcheverry grew up in the South American football culture and his style — technical, expressive, and improvisational — aligns with the Joga Bonito ethos. His 69 assists at club level reflect a player whose primary joy was creating for others.

TERTIARY — BIELSA INTENSITY (#46) · 72% INFERENTIAL

The South American intensity link. Etcheverry's willingness to run at defenders and his physical resilience in the face of heavy challenges reflect the Bielsa-esque intensity that characterized the best South American football of the 1990s.

5 · TACTICAL DNA PAIRING (PLAYER ARCHETYPE) — SAME-POSITION ONLY

> ⚠ Same-position archetypes only (attacking midfielder / playmaker). The percentages below are inferential analyst estimates, not Tier 3 scores.

CHART 5 · PLAYER PAIRING — BAR

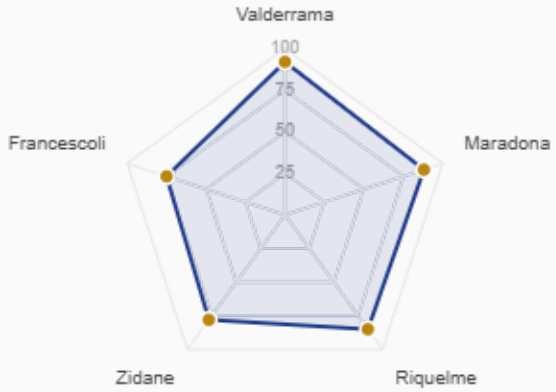

CHART 7 · PLAYER PAIRING — VALUES (SAME-POSITION ONLY)

Bar-length = inferential band. Percentage is the analyst estimate for this file only.

Carlos Valderrama (Colombia)	AM	92%	Same position
Diego Maradona (Argentina)	AM	88%	Same position
Juan Román Riquelme (Argentina)	AM	85%	Same position
Zinedine Zidane (France)	AM	78%	Same position
Enzo Francescoli (Uruguay)	AM	75%	Same position

PRIMARY — CARLOS VALDERRAMA (COLOMBIA, ATTACKING MIDFIELDER) · 92% INFERENTIAL

The closest stylistic and regional match. Valderrama was the archetypal South American playmaker of the 1990s — a left-footed creator with extraordinary vision and a similar physical profile. Both were the creative hubs of their national teams and both excelled in MLS. The pairing is strong on role, era, and style.

SECONDARY — DIEGO MARADONA (ARGENTINA, ATTACKING MIDFIELDER) · 88% INFERENTIAL

The benchmark for the left-footed, dribbling playmaker. Etcheverry's "devilish" dribbling and his ability to glide past defenders inevitably draw comparison with Maradona. While Etcheverry did not reach the same heights, the stylistic DNA is clear.

TERTIARY — JUAN ROMÁN RIQUELME (ARGENTINA, ATTACKING MIDFIELDER) · 85% INFERENTIAL

The pure playmaker archetype. Riquelme's game — slow, deliberate, and built on vision and passing rather than pace — is a different expression of the same position. Etcheverry was more direct, but the creative hub role is shared.

8 · HISTORICAL CONTEXT & LEGACY

Marco Etcheverry is the archetypal Bolivian playmaker and one of the most influential South American footballers of the 1990s. Born in Santa Cruz de la Sierra, he emerged from the famous Tahuichi Academy and became the creative force behind Bolivia's golden generation.

His career was defined by two contrasting chapters: the struggle in Europe with Albacete, where anxiety and stress nearly derailed him, and the triumph in the United States, where he became the first Bolivian superstar in MLS. At D.C. United, he won three MLS Cups, the 1996 MVP, and recorded 67 assists — a club record that still stands.

For Bolivia, he was the talisman of the 1994 World Cup qualification campaign, scoring crucial goals against Brazil and Uruguay. His 71 caps and 13 goals place him among the country's greatest players.

The honest reading of this file is therefore twofold. As archetype language, Etcheverry is a high-confidence example of the left-footed, creative South American playmaker — a player whose dribbling, vision, and dead-ball ability made him a defining figure of his era. As FGA evidence, the file is strong on statistics but partial on video: a comprehensive FBref dataset, but no match-by-match event log, no full 90-minute footage, and no second scout. The correct output is a provisional FGA status with a documented path to completion.
